

■ OLD ENOUGH TO STAY YOUNG

What sounds like a contradiction bears a lot of truth. The nicest thing about memories is that you can create new ones every day.

Since 1745 until the present day, with 260 years of experience, and being family owned and managed for 7 generations we are going stronger than ever before. Our philosophy has endured all economical and technical changes, all political and social tumbles. Moreover we always came out stronger, confirmed in our success. Perhaps due to a few simple principles:

We always offer what our customers need to move goods and materials easy and safely. This was once certified when our company was established in 1745: jacks of utmost quality and long endurance. Today this is still valid from our air hoists to complete explosion proof crane systems.

Based on compressed air power we develop and offer solutions for almost any material handling challenge.

Planning, design, manufacturing, customer service - an all encompassing quality management system is not just certified by DNV. Of equal importance is that each employee takes his responsibility with utmost seriousness and lives our quality ideal. 140 people in the JDN group of companies worldwide live and work according to this motto. This includes JDN in Germany, France, Great Britain, Singapore and the USA. Our global orientation with exclusive partners allows our representation in about 90 countries. Our export ratio is 60% plus, reaching customers in more than 70 industries.

JDN hoists can be found on drilling rigs way offshore, in multiple industries on dry land and deep down in the earth in mining operations. In short - wherever they are needed.

Furthermore we are always mindful of our roots and beginnings. The history of lifting equipment is well documented in our museums from the Stone Age into the 21st century.

Air is safe, and in contrast to electricity it does not create sparks. With the exception of the spark that ignites the magic of fascinating technology and total quality devotion for the benefit of our customers.
